Show HN: Deserializing a file to a map in JavaScript - mehwoot ===== ja27 Interesting but won't work for binary files. Also, couldn't you simply use JSON.parse() on it? ~~~ mehwoot Hi, I'm the creator. You can use this on binary files with the binary library ([~~~ ja27 It works for the files I tried, but I thought it might have been the binary library rather than me guessing incorrectly. Good work! Q: What is the difference between a string and a string parameter in ruby? In Ruby, the only difference between "string" and "string" is that the latter is preferred due to programming style and style consistency. What is the motivation behind this? A: Every method accepts 2 parameters. The first one is the parameter name, while the second one is the argument value. In such case, when you use 2 arguments, the first argument gets the parameter name, while the second one is the value. RDoc has good summary: Update for your code example, 1) def send_email(time_of_message) Mailer.deliver_email(time_of_message) end 2) def send_email(message) Mailer.deliver_email(message) end Just a note that, this method take as argument an instance variable, not a string, which is of course considered as empty string.
