It's that time of year again: once again we celebrate the four magnificent days of the Whitsun. And as the weather is warming up, I thought it'd be good to start a series of posts, each of which takes a little break from the norm. After such a thrilling climax to our seasons of pain in 2002 and 2003, you can hardly be surprised that next year is going to be even more exciting! But what are your plans? I'll be doing my usual thing of talking about various interesting apps that I have to hand for various tasks, including '04 videos. I'll also be looking at the audio-visual offerings of other studios and what I think about them, as well as looking at the video/photo releases from various other sites this week. And you can expect a poll regarding the best videos from 2003. But in the lead-up to the big day, you can expect to see me commentate on the season's final races and reviewing the various programmes and races from previous years. I'm sure you'll all look forward to these...but I wouldn't expect me to be too talkative! If you want to send me something to review, email me at timemachine@altavista.com. As a tribute to my good friend and fellow forum user, 'Sally' (for it's her birthday this week), here's a video for you all, which I hope she'll find a little amusing...Happy Birthday, Sally! The place: The location, which is on my

If you are planning on expanding your business, you may want to ask yourself whether you should outsource your call center operations or handle everything in-house. Outsourcing gives you an opportunity to save money and time, but it also carries a significant risk. In the end, you have to decide whether outsourcing or doing it yourself is more appealing for your business. Reasons to outsource Here are some of the key reasons to outsource your call center operations: Revenue - This is the primary reason why most companies outsource. It allows them to keep a more direct control over the way they run their business. They can also make sure that their staff members are well-versed in the current trends in the market. They can also ensure that they don't have to spend a lot of money and time to provide quality customer service. Revenue - Doing it yourself is often the best way to go if you are planning to set up a new service. Outsourcing allows you to use a multitude of agents at a fraction of the cost. Quality of services - Outsourcing your operations allows you to take advantage of an expert workforce. You can also make sure that your agents are well trained and that you can give them consistent direction. You can also be sure that the agents are always well versed with the latest trends in the market. Quality of services - Outsourcing allows you to do away with the hassle of dealing with your customers directly. Your customers will appreciate your patience and your professionalism and you can save a lot of time and money on their satisfaction. Quality of services - Outsourcing makes you independent from your agents. You can choose to work with the best of the best and you can also make sure that they are always well versed with the latest trends in the market. This means that your customers won't have to wait for any updates and they will be satisfied with the services they receive. Quality of services - When you have full control over your operations, you will be able to control the quality of the services you provide. This means that your customers will always be satisfied with the services they receive and you can have the peace of mind that they will come back to you every time. Revenue - Outsourcing gives you a chance to create a valuable relationship with your customers and to establish a long-term clientele. This means that you are sure that your customers will come back to you for all of their needs. The quality of services - When you are the one
