IMPROVED PS/2 MOUSE ASSIST: Four new customizable buttons on the mouse let you use your mouse however you want. The button closest to the side of the mouse can be used to scroll up and down, while the button on the other side lets you see previews of the available network in Windows. Pressing the left side button lets you scroll up and down in web pages, and the opposite side button lets you pan through 360° images in a YouTube video. Download Corsair Utility Engine now! While the core specs are the same as the new m15 series, new upgrades include Intel’s HD 5500 series mobile GPU. Another highlight is that this is the first laptop to be powered by Intel’s 8th Gen Coffee Lake processor, so that it can run the new 9th Gen H-series GPU without many bumps, and will also be a good partner for the upcoming 9th Gen 9-series graphics card due later this year. With its sexy looks and our early-access unit, we believe this will be one of the hottest portable gaming laptops around. And with improved IPS LED screen, the high-refresh rate panel is also pretty nice. That’s not all. The m15 5 claims to run circles around several of its rivals in both categories, so if you want gaming and all these other nice features, it’s almost like we’re not giving much away. The last major upgrade has to do with the m15 5’s new 15.6-inch display. Its 4K panel is a nice upgrade over the m15 4’s Full HD option and one that benefits from the improved upgrade path of Intel’s 9th Gen family. The latest RoG offering, which is basically a G-series version of the previous i-series, will be available later this year, and will include a number of other improvements to the 9th Generation graphics architecture as well as a new display with native 120Hz refresh rate.
