Charlotte's story has ended. Charlotte's story has begun. "And then, I remember dying." That's all you remember from the incident that ended your life. Have you ever come into contact with the nature-gone-mad? "Yeah, there are those animals that put things into life, aren't there? At you should be careful to find it, otherwise, you are going to get a wrong combination and you are going to need a lot of space. You are going to need to learn how to deal with the limited inventory space. Play the game properly You should try not to make mistakes while playing. A lot of your visitor can die if you do not have enough space. If you have space, you should try to hide the body if you do not want to scare the visitor. Remember that food is needed for the visitor. If you cannot find any food, you will need to use the journal to put an important message in it. You should be careful to follow the hidden pattern. You will not be able to understand it if you do not know where the pattern is. If you have a shadow at the other side of the room, you are not going to be able to see the pattern properly.

What's new in Deadliners - Soundtrack:

on Mars NASA has given up on Mars - and now believes there was once life on the Red Planet. The space agency has touched down with its latest set of sensors on a rocky surface. The mission will uncover what's causing wind erosion. Also, Ziya Moti, the author and filmmaker, completes season 3 of his series, Black Hole Blues. Transcript NASA riffs on ancient Mars (BEGIN VIDEOTAPE) JULIE CASIMIR, CNN CORRESPONDENT: We're reporting live from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California, where the first "rovers" of NASA's new mission to Mars are being revealed today. We got our first peek at the strange, rust-colored surface of Mars earlier this year when the Phoenix Lander landed and saw the wind-sculpted, sandy terrain dubbed "Stones." And there is no question that the red planet has moved on. So, now, this new mission appears to have it all. It's going to pinpoint, in the next few weeks, the chemical elements that are responsible for the wind scour that sculpted the landscape on Mars. This will tell us, as a first -- as a first test -- what the weather looks like on Mars. And this mission isn't the only one NASA's got in store for a series of robotic landings on Mars. Another mission, "Curiosity," will touch down later this year, and there are two others that will follow. Together, they're forming a revolution in our understanding of the newest planet we've learned to explore. Why are those ridges on Mars? What are those dunes that are seen? What is the color of the Mars that we see? Is it really the color of the ground, or is it the soil that's been redeposited? As famous astronaut Buzz Aldrin once said, "I'd like to be proven wrong by future missions. But by the time they're ready, I won't be there to be proven wrong." He was referring, of course, to the Soviet Union's failed Mars program. However, today, scientists do not understand the past as well as they want to. So, there's a lot of excitement when we come across that little piece of Mars that seems to change everything that we think we knew -- their first drive on the surface of Mars in 30 years. It's a revolutionary event. And

Savage Shooters is an ultra-fast, ultra-violent, chaotic shooter with a monstrous arsenal of special weapons! This fast paced and furious free to play action game is made up of "dumb" guns - skill is not required. Your target is simply the alien thing in the distance, and your tool of destruction is a single bullet. Randomly generated stages are split into four distinct game types, and they are the reason this game is so interesting. The first mode is a vertical scrolling shooter, similar to Galaga. The next mode is the arcade classic, the triple shoot 'em up, where each level has up to 3 targets, and you fire at them, all at once, to blast them to bits. The third mode is the furious free-for-all death match, where a plethora of each weapons is on-screen at once. The last game mode is a variety of game over screens and cinematic cut scenes. Single player mode has both a story and a skip feature, and you can select five different difficulties, ranging from rookie to master. Multiplayer mode is also a true challenge, as it combines both local and online play. And the ultra-violent free to play nature of this game means that you can lose a life and carry on, as long as you like! Customize your character with 4 different skin colors, 8 weapon skins, and an arsenal of 13 different guns! Choose between 4 possible characters, and then pick from each character's special ability, your guns, and weapon accessories. Just get through the story in first person, and you'll be invited to play more stages! Savage Shooters is the only shooter game to integrate a multi-player head-to-head death match in its story mode, and the first to use the word shoot instead of kill. - Virtual addiction - More than 50 weapons - graphics and guns - 13 different guns - Tactical gameplay - 4 different stories - 5 different levels - 5 different skins - 4 different characters - Online death match with invitational tournaments - Skipping stage - Save game - True to classic - Beautiful cartoon graphics - Hard to master - No ad - So much free content - Free to play All features currently available in the free version. Try the free version, and then decide if you're going to play as Gus Leroux: A former lawyer with a penchant for violence, or as

Editor's note: Brandon Reeves is a freelance reporter and photographer based in Florida. In addition to covering all things Florida, he focuses on UFOs, including military sightings. He contributed this report. PHOENIX - If you're driving through Georgia this weekend, you can catch a glimpse of a large white orb. In a matter of seconds, the light will disappear from the sky, as a tractor-trailer truck pulls up to it. That's because if you were to look up into the sky, you'd find that underneath the overcast sky, there is a dome-like object hovering about 160 feet off the ground in the air. Conspiracy theorists have claimed for years that the U.S. government has, on occasion, been involved in UFO hoaxes, but a case in Georgia at the International UFO Museum & Research Center's annual summit in Georgia this weekend seems to point to something far more sinister. This week at the museum, a young man came forward, claiming to have had an encounter with "contactees" - the people he's come to know as "humans from another planet." He claims to have been under government mind-control for a total of 18 years. So who are these contactees, and how did our government create this mind-control of an entire generation? "We could control and influence them and made 'em believe it's [down to] their own will."
