Although cosmetic surgery procedures are occasionally associated with significant and rare serious complications such as infection, bleeding, and injury, nonsurgical complications rarely are fatal. The authors describe a case of a 20-year-old woman with idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis, prone to pneumothorax, who died within 24 hours after pectoral dermal-subcutaneous augmentation with microfillers that was performed as a treatment for chest deformities secondary to pulmonary fibrosis. At autopsy, an intraluminal injection of filler and an underlying granuloma, both associated with an abscess and other incidental findings, were present. The authors conclude that when a patient dies within 24 hours after cosmetic surgery, urgent autopsies are indicated.

A man who was suspected of being intoxicated driving a scooter on a busy North Sydney street yesterday afternoon has been located by police. It is believed that he was riding on Ramsden Street, near the corner of Langton Road, at about 3pm yesterday. Police did not release the man's name. He remains in police custody. Police said it is a common misconception that only drivers who hold a full or provisional licence are required to carry documents showing their licence conditions. "All drivers must carry their
