“We’re very excited to be introducing this new feature,” said Peter Rauert, Executive Producer for FIFA.

“We’ve captured some amazing motion capture data over the past 12 months, and are now working to support it with gameplay at a level not experienced before in a football game. We’ll continue to work with the clubs, players, support staff, and coaches to ensure this is the best experience possible, and hope you enjoy what you see.” FIFA 18 introduced its own motion capture technology in November 2017. The FIFA 18 demo introduced “FIFA Motion.” It showed a series of immersive pre-rendered sequences taken from matches between players and shows that in 2017 mode, we will be able to see the realistic foot-by-foot contact of movement in the real-world and impact it has on the dynamic systems of FIFA. The video above shows an example of what appears to be a cross between a player’s face and an explosion. The game can now more accurately deal with such situations and cause real-world environmental interactions. The technology itself uses “3D digitized, physically accurate data captured by 16 Real Player Motion Capture cameras and is synchronised with EA SPORTS motion technology. The motion capture data is used to drive a wide range of player animations - including player creation, game physics and ball movement.” EA SPORTS also announced today that will be showcasing the technology at this year’s E3 expo. In FIFA 21, the cover athlete and other players on the cover have facial expressions in accordance with the player’s face ID. This is an extended version of the facial animation released for the FIFA 18 demo and is used in the video above.

It shows what the result will look like after a collision. The game also supports new player and team animations. New animations include legs, hands, and positioning in defense. In previous iterations of the game, players ran in place when they saw they were being tackled. Now, their run is more believable and more realistic. The developers also seem to be taking up more real-world moves during fights. Players may show a greater range of movement, especially in explosive situations. Blows will also have more impact and body parts will move more realistically. Players will fall down when they are tackled or when they get tackled. "Be more prepared to fight for the ball with your player"

FIFA is EA SPORTS FIFA 22 is the EA SPORTS FIFA franchise. Released in late September 2014, it's the 21st instalment in the franchise that introduced us to the new UCL finals in 2013. The game features new animation, ball physics, and new licensing in Brazil and other new territories. What's New in FIFA 22? Last year's Next Player Technology returns with improved ball handling, greater speed and jump, and more variable distance control. New Clubs The game features the additions of new clubs from around the world, including West Ham United, Olympique Marseille and Valencia. New Rule Sets The new FIFA 22 rule sets features a new 5-a-side version of set 3, and a new 4-a-side version of set 4. New in FIFA 22 is a handful of new rule changes. Player Duel Players will now have improved cover shadow technology, as well as a new ability to walk with the ball or run without the ball. Animation and Player Trajectory As in FIFA 11, Player Trajectories take into account player acceleration and unbalancing forces, giving players more control over the speed and direction of their runs. Player animations have also been tweaked, for example, the left foot if struck with the right foot or vice versa, will cause the pitch to bend and spiral in the direction of the injury. New Refereeing Refereeing has been revamped, with instant yellow card's given for fouls and red cards issued for serious fouls, including diving, an obstruction and denying an obvious goal-scoring opportunity. New Goalkeeper Goalkeepers are now more agile and more variable in their range of actions. New Skills New Skills like the "Throw-In," "Throttle" and "Driving Attacks" have been included. New Commentary Team Now commentators will be heard in the soundscape and pitch-side view, providing strategic breakdowns of goals, a new emphasis on replay analysis, as well as career milestones, and personalized analytical data. New Starting XI Youth Ultimate, a new goalkeepers-only mode, is included in this year's game. * For a more detailed preview of FIFA 22, check out the official new features video, "For a more detailed preview of FIFA bc9d6d6daa
