I am not very well versed in the field of biomechanics and biomech-like characters, but I do know that the body of the robot/creature is "sculpted," not "drawn." So, I am not sure if that "interactive model" was a SCULP/RENDER or a GRAPH/SCULP/RENDER.The software looks pretty well done, and I am very intrigued about "how" they did it, but what you posted in your first video is not very accurate. If the second video is what you are referring to, then it is just a 3D model of a pretty generic robot. The first video is a really cool project and more technology is needed to make this a more interesting robot.I guess in the end, we just need to watch more videos and learn more about the technology you use. Fantasy Grounds After having a bit of a look at the last dungeon. The pace of the beginning of the dungeon was overwhelming and I can't personally wait to see where the next group of folks will get spawned in the empty room. The Goblin Warren Background: Titus, after many months of endless travel and suffering through the sweltering desert of Qrow, finally, they arrive at the clearing of The Goblin Warren. At last they arrive, just as the folk on guard teleport the delivery to their makeshift factory works. They begin to fight as the gates are closed. Finally, after hours of fighting, a great war in the distant nethers he he he he he he he he, they destroy the gates. Jumping across what was once the walls of Qrow to reach them. A man emerges! A young boy! It's a girl. A young girl who is a great warrior in every sense of the word, a shining nobel Knight called Pyp. This encounter also means the end of the month, and the NWT7M is the last use of your 30 encounters. On Topic: In the way that I've been playing around with dungeon puzzle challenges, this triggered the memories of the dungeon I crafted for the NWT1M in 2017-18. After making in the land of the magic (this a simplified version from the final place) I constructed a dungeon using the ideas of Fiasco or a really excellent chart of treasure types. I used the dungeon as a teaching aid in a social educational setting. .. After 4 sessions, the 4th and final with the actual adventure group, they had a "Fuck-it, lets do this" moment. Everyone decided to kick back a cask of whiskey. After a few rounds of drinking, someone bursts into the dungeon. They had a locked door, a secret passage….??? I realized that the room fell down above us due to the tessellation. So that was the excitement of the above. You can find the final dungeon for the NWT's here. With that, the rest is nothing but cleanup before the next first session. Goblin Warren The Goblin Warren is a place dedicated to the spirits of the goblins. This is a laboratory and factory converted into a tomb for the goblins,

The fly kind of drones could be used to jam enemy radars and transmit jamming signals such as sound waves and radio waves to interfere with missiles and guns, for example. The project for a commercially piloted flying drone has been backed by the Department of Defence. It is expected to cost €75 million and will be ready in five years, according to a report. Minister for Defence Simon Coveney has said Ireland is going to be one of the drone manufacturing hubs in the world. He said: "We are going to have one of the world's most advanced drone manufacturing sites in Shannon." Limerick-based drone company Aerocat says the drones will produce on the side of their enterprise technology base. Staff from Aerocat and other groups have been taught drone design and programming by team from Defence Science and Technology Ireland. Aerocat's director, Paddy Droney, said: "It is a unique product as we are the first company selling drones to civilian market. "As far as I know, there will be at least eight other people out there building drones commercially." Mr Droney said: "Our product is the cost to the consumer. We have been able to reduce the cost of design, programming and service by 10 to 15 per cent." The drones will be mainly used for aerial surveillance, particularly for monitoring farms. The company's drones can be programmed
