Home > News > Authorities in Czech Republic carry out biggest anti-piracy drive. Another night of the prime minister's Question Time has unearthed an extraordinary tale of gay cow-stealing - involving a gay couple. The cow-stealing allegations were raised in a question from the audience, asking 'Do you think politicians should be ministers?' Damian Thompson suggested it was time for Owen Jones to ask David Cameron a question on the topic of homosexuality. Rather than sticking to his usual subject, lones said he was going to ask a question that 'every gay person knows the answer to'. He asked if ministers should be gay. The PM's famously crisp replies and summaries had already put a small number of Conservative Party members off asking him questions, with one polling to make a joke. I am told the results of our poll show this question of Owen Jones' is not acceptable Chris Grayling Chief Whip Damian Jones didn't seem to get it that the first rule of politics is to not walk if you can't run. The crowd thought he had made a great point - until they realised that he didn't actually know what the first rule of politics was. So Jones, clearly oblivious to the fact he wasn't asking a question, thought he had done an excellent job. Cue a very amusing - and most of all, unscripted - answer from Mr Cameron. Related Articles "I am told the results of our poll show this question of Owen Jones' is not acceptable," he said. It was a typically pithy answer from the PM, but not everyone was happy. Damian Thompson, the Tory MP who raised the issue of gay ministers, can be seen sniggering at the corner of the audience. Another row erupted when Mark Reckless suggested schools should expel pupils for being gay. Chris Grayling, the Conservative Party's chief whip, intervened to suggest he'd heard the guestion from a number of audience members
