Adobe Photoshop is a vector graphics editor with editing tools to make simple color adjustments, apply paint effects, crop and straighten photos. With Photoshop, you can use layer styles to add fancier effects to your pictures or use the Blob Brush to paint on an image. The most basic Photoshop features. A few of the most basic features of Photoshop are resolution, color, and resolution settings. Resolution You can change the resolution of your image from being very low quality to a very high quality setting. The pixel size is also called dpi (dots per inch) or px. Lower resolutions are usually smaller pixels and can look blurry. They also save file space. The image settings menu If you make multiple copies of a layer with the same adjustment then it is a good idea to save at the lowest possible resolution. This will save the most space and makes it easier to find when searching for images on a hard drive. When you print your images you will likely want to set the resolution to the best setting for your print. Color You can change the color of an image to make it appear black and white or a specific color. When your image appears gray it is because of an improperly edited color. You can click on the color tab to select a specific color. Adjusting the color of the image You can also use color adjustment layers to make a specific color in your image look less saturated or too strong. Save Settings When you first open an image, you should save the settings. This is called a "preset" in Photoshop or "preview" in

Photoshop Elements. If you save your work and close Photoshop without saving, you will lose any edits and have to start over. The Save dialog box A Preset saves your settings when you open an image so when you open the image you will be able to use the settings you had when you saved it. Selecting a predefined setting Most photos are in color and there are many ways to change the look of an image. With Photoshop, you can change the color of a photo to look more vibrant or dreary. There are also many ways to add interest or make a photo look artistic. The best way to know what you like is to try them all. Layers Layers are the building blocks of any graphic 05a79cecff in the record. Therefore, I would hold that a reasonable fact finder could have concluded that Hardaway was in imminent danger of death or serious bodily injury and that a reasonable person would have believed that a downward adjustment of three levels would be sufficient to prevent the harm. Therefore, I would hold that the district court did not err by applying the two-level, instead of the three-level, downward adjustment under § 3E1.1(a). I would affirm the judgment of the district court. Because the majority holds that the district court was correct in using a three-level downward adjustment, and because the majority does not address the other issue raised by the parties, I respectfully dissent. Tom G. Davis Justice Do not publish. Tex. R. App. P. 47.3. Opinion delivered and filed this the 31st day of August, 2000. U.S. Pat. No. 4,608,746 to Askew et al. discloses a method and apparatus for protecting a blank of foil from the effects of radiant heat and for monitoring the quality of a product formed from the foil by the application of radiant heat. The apparatus and method utilize a pattern of optical cavities formed in a blank of foil in which the cavities are subsequently filled with a fluid which absorbs incident radiant heat at a greater extent than the foil material of the blank. Each optical cavity is adapted to independently monitor the absorption of radiant heat by the fluid filling the cavity and thus produce an independent signal indicative of the absorption of radiant heat by the fluid. The signals are used to produce an average signal representative of the sum total of the total absorbing area of the fluid filling the optical cavities. A graphic representation of the absorption of radiant heat by the fluid in each cavity is superimposed on the average signal. This patent requires that the cavities formed in the blank of foil be filled with the fluid through a hole in the foil at a later point in the processing of the foil. The requirement of filling cavities with fluid is clearly a time-consuming process. This patent also discloses that the fluid may be colored to facilitate the production of a graphic representation of the average signal, however, this technique
