Yesterday we reported about the possibility for a PlayStation Vita TV set top box based on the PlayStation TV and that it was in the works at Sony. Tonight an official teaser has appeared on the Sony Japan website and would appear to indicate that there will be a release date for this new addition to the PlayStation family. The PlayStation Vita TV has been officially announced for Japan last week and the date of release is October 5th, 2014. The video gives a sneak peak at some of the features of the device, such as the full PlayStation Network functionality on the set top box. It will feature Netflix, Amazon and YouTube as well as apps like Best Shot and MLB The Show. The video also mentions of the use of over-the-air TV, which suggests that there is the ability to use the device as a TV antennae as well. No plans on when the device will be released outside of Japan have been announced. For more on the PlayStation Vita TV hit our PlayStation Vita TV page.

How To Crack & Activation Code Survival Draw Online

Unlike Android & iOS based phones which run on operating systems. IOS is the closed source & Android is the open source based. This difference is the reason why we need to download thousands of applications to match to the requirements of the phone. The downside of this method is that we need to uninstall those applications we download from “Google Play” or “App Store” if we don’t like that application. When we opt to uninstall those applications, our mobile gets filled with all the data in that particular directory. When we download an apps for the first time then, we need to choose to “create” or “sign” the directory at which time we need to enter a password that will be stored in the application memory by the creator of that specific app. Once you have started using that app for a long period of time, you will find the “Don’t ask” option is given in the app that will never come up before and you won’t need to enter that password again. The numbers of such apps are in millions.

Thus, this method will consume lot of storage space of your mobile battery and decrease the performance of your phone because we have deleted the original app and installed the new one. Sometimes there could be compatibility issues with apps so we need to uninstall those applications first & then install the old apk to make sure that it works fine. Luckily, there are some very good developers who have made it with Google play store.
