This disclosure relates to medical devices such as annuloplasty rings for repairing a heart valve annulus of a patient, and to corresponding methods of making and using such devices. For example, some known annuloplasty rings include a generally central opening for insertion of a valve. Annuloplasty rings can be effective in repairing tissue of the heart valve annulus that has become excessively prolapsed or dilated. However, it can be difficult to position annuloplasty rings with the required precision to precisely target a desired site, due to the flexibility of the material.
