New Fantasy Action RPG is a game that looks like a game that only Mages would enjoy. Build up your strength with the skills from the beginning, level up your magic then of course there's the skills we all know and love. Make the enemy's wave of strikes back and at the end of the round you go to the nearest inn and regain some health. It's not that bad but there is this one part where there are five slots in your inventory and if you use up to four of them at once you have to heal for 20 and it's quite annoying. The mechanics are pretty standard for RPGs and one of the most important factor in these kinds of games. The weapons do not carry over to the next round and every time you level up your weapons become stronger and stronger so you always have to equip the strongest one. When you gain a level you go to the inn and buy three stats and they slowly increase but you can only buy one stat per item. The skills increase as you level up and they can also be equipped on different slots so it's easy to change them and this might be useful as you go into a battle. My major gripe though is the music. It's way too repetitive and it's very annoying to listen to. I'll play for a while and I'll only be listening to one song that's on repeat and that's when the song stops playing. The soundtrack is not even a very good one that sounds very cheap. The city screens are very repetitive as well. You have your stats and you can buy shops but it's very uninteresting. You can just tell it was made before RPGs were popular so I understand it. The graphics are very simple but the world map is a nice addition. It's basically a world map that you can move around but you have to be in a battle at that moment so it doesn't do anything besides showing the world map. It has a setting that is very similar to FFX but it's better in some ways because it doesn't have a clock in the top left corner. That would be really annoying to me because I just want to beat enemies and take the money and run. In Conclusion, I think it would have been better if it had a permanent clock. Although there is a clock but you still have to be in the battle. It's very annoying to have to click and wait for the clock to move and it's very annoying to click and run and wait. Overall
