$Yi2EZxv3Ty5a7i$@$i1rxo.co I love this game so much, it seems like the perfect dark comedy horror game. This game is a tribute to old-school 30s and 40s horror films, like "Phantasm" and "Carnival of Souls". It's a very dark and atmospheric game that makes you feel this creepy atmosphere with the great sound and soundtrack. I love it! Definitely worth checking out. You are an amnesiac named Jack, who is awakened one day by a bunch of nuns outside a barn. You do not remember who you are or why they wanted you. You spent the night there, but the next morning, you woke up on a bed, with a cracked skull. You are a sweet and intelligent woman. You get to choose your ending, good or evil, depending on how you play. I really enjoyed this game, I'm really looking forward to playing this, as I've always wanted to play a game like this with "choice". The game looks beautiful too. I wish the game was more generous with the free passes they were giving for free however. I was so close to actually getting it on steam, and I didn't. All of those people who are saying what a well-made game this is, need to shut up, as that's not how I see it. On a positive note, it looks great, and is just a really cool game overall. All in all, I'd recommend that you buy the game, and not get a free copy, as it

What's new:

Lone Vessel (aka Violet) is the second feature film from Australian independent cinema production company Lola's Island, formed by director Mark Atkins and fellow Australian actors Lucy Gutteridge and Sam Worthington. The film was released on 15 June 2009 in Australia. Plot The film takes place in a future where 10 years have passed and where a massive asteroid has fallen and tilted the world's axis, causing an 11.7 magnitude tidal wave that wiped out 80% of the world's population. Most of the US East Coast, the UK and China was destroyed along with numerous major cities of Southern Europe. Cities have been rebuilt yet interstellar travel remains a difficult industry. The film follows the story of Professor William (Ewan McGregor), an academic studying the effects of the asteroid and conducting experiments to learn more about physics. He has also seemingly lost his younger son, Aaron, who is then saved by an astronaut aboard an enormous spaceship travelling back to the US. Isabella Forsythe (Lucy Gutteridge), a genetic biologist who manages the research crew aboard the spaceship, assigns a new crew member to assist Professor William. Unfortunately, her fresh crew member is Chris Frances-Williams (Sam Worthington), a suave and charming aviation pilot who immediately wins over most of the crew except for William. William's boyish friend, Gary (Sam Johnson) is also on the ship. Chris is also romantically interested in Isabella, although he is aware that she is engaged to her friend, Sammy (Ben Linford). On the crew's first mission to the asteroid belt, the ship runs into difficulties and Chris is forced to crash land the craft. As the crew realise that they will soon collide with the asteroid, Chris saves her life by shielding her from the risk of the massive fall at the end of the ship. Meanwhile, Isabella, while adjusting to her new position onboard the ship, and separated from Chris, is compelled to reunite with her estranged father, Charlie (Don Hany), the ship's doctor. Chris is too proud to admit his feelings for the woman, but they grow closer through their work. Chris and Isabella's relationship is further complicated by Chris' unhealthy obsessions with Chris' late mother, Alex (Francesca Daetoo), whom he mourns for the loss of his father, who died in a car accident as a teenager.
