To investigate the effect of different doses of interferon-alpha (IFN-alpha) in adult patients with hepatitis C. Seventy-four adult patients with chronic hepatitis C were randomly assigned to receive IFN-alpha (3 MU three times a week) for 12-24 months. They were assigned to 2 groups: group A received 10 MU (2 x 5 MU) per week; group B received 15 MU (3 x 5 MU) per week. ELISA test for the detection of anti-HCV antibody was performed before IFN-alpha therapy and 12 months later after the end of therapy. HCV-RNA was assessed by nested-PCR 12 months after the end of the treatment. If patients were cleared of HCV-RNA 12 months after the end of IFN-alpha therapy, they were followed up for another year. Liver biopsy was performed before IFN-alpha therapy and 12 months later after the end of therapy for patients who still showed abnormal ALT. (1) Seventy-four patients were enrolled. Among them, 4 patients were lost to follow-up. In group A, HCV-RNA was cleared in 12 of 21 (57.1%) patients. Two patients who were still positive for HCV-RNA at the end of IFN-alpha therapy but whose ALT normalized subsequently relapsed after treatment withdrawal. (2) Patients in group B cleared the virus in 12 of 24 (50.0%) cases. Among them, HCV-RNA was still negative after IFN-alpha therapy in 11 patients. Two patients relapsed after treatment withdrawal. (1) HCV-RNA disappears rapidly from the blood of most patients after IFN-alpha therapy. In patients who still show HCV-RNA in their
