But I wanted to apply the concept to tower defense as well. This will be a physics-based sandbox game. However, the things can be built like tower defense. For the large amount of work it will be difficult to complete it in 12 months. "Ode to Adventure" An Adventure Module for use with the Fantasy Grounds virtual tabletop This adventure is tailored for the physically-fit investigator; the challenges include an expedition to the icy interior, the climbing of dangerous glaciers, and encounters with hostile humans and others. At the end of the journey the investigators will find themselves faced with an ancient stone temple guarded by an inhuman sentinel. If the investigators can gain entry to this building, they will find clues to the disappearance of the strange race that once worshiped here. For the less physically-fit, more scholarly investigator, opportunities for quieter studious adventures also exist while in Greenland. The original PDF contained three short adventures. This module contains only the first of three loosely connected modules. However, its design is flexible enough that it can be effectively run with any version of the ruleset. A character may or may not be familiar with the setting prior to being sent by the Foundation for Arcane Sciences to investigate a rumored incident of madness in a far-flung land of strange ruins and forgotten cultures. The party comes from civilized centers of the galaxy like New England and Australia, where better-trained investigators have already ruled out a natural explanation for the behavior of the local natives. The character's objective is to investigate evidence of the existence of a mysterious race of Ice Elves who live far to the north. Because an expedition to this isolated region has never been conducted before, no accurate information on their civilization or environment has been gathered. The hope is that hard work and careful observation will give the investigators some new insights on the mission. Location There are three to six locations within the adventure, each chosen for
