_____ In this episode of the Pathfinder Party podcast, Elliott and Mike speak with Chris Perkins about how to run a game of mythic spells! We go over the details of mythic magic including why mythic spells might be powerful, mythic spell casting weapons (in both Pathfinder and Pathfinder 2), and the impact of mythic magics on the most potent magic items available to the party! Myths are a very powerful source of magic in and of themselves. Even when written down, myths and ancient stories are never quite accurate, and real-world myths seem to support a practice that makes mythic magic difficult to be resisted. As mythic magic continues to grow in the campaign, the mythic spells they produce increase in power, as the power of the magic is magnified exponentially by the myth of the magic. Chris Perkins is a rules guru, consultant, game designer, and writer. He has worked with Wizards of the Coast, Paizo, Kobold Press, and Western Publishing on their projects. Chris was the main developer of the Pathfinder Core rulebook and Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Pathfinder second edition. He was also the artist who illustrated the original Pathfinder box art. He is a veteran of many Pathfinder gaming conventions, including GenCon and Origins, and speaks with players and GMs at these events, at Paizo's Pathfinder headquarters in Lake Geneva, WI, and at D&D conventions. He has been online at Game Forum for years, answering questions, posting ideas, and helping people. Chris is also co-owner of Happy Infographic, and has worked on comic books and comic strips for Marvel Comics, Dark Horse Comics, and Phoenix Comics. He has also written for the cartoon series Histeria in the first season and is now writing for Histeria in the second season, as well as writing for Cartoon Network's upcoming series The Amazing World of Gumball. Chris is also in the computer animation business, working on a series of animated shorts called Skatopia.
