UMass grad shines as returning starter UMass grad Allyn Kells will be returning to the starting lineup this fall as the Minutemen's quarterback after earning a significant role in UMass' offense over the course of spring practice. He became the first player in school history to go from the redshirt to the starting lineup after starting nine of the 13 games for the Minutemen in 2012. Kells started six games and threw for 854 yards and nine touchdowns, and didn't throw an interception. He started at quarterback for UMass in the season opener against Georgia Southern, and returned to start for the Minutemen in their next four games. "I think that's all you can ask of yourself. You want to be the best quarterback you can be," Kells said. "I think getting things going in the right direction, I feel like I did a good job of that." Kells' stellar spring came on a day when UMass wrapped up practice after losing by a score of 23-22 to No.

24 Boston College, a result that was a major disappointment for Minutemen coach Charley Molnar. Molnar went into the spring with a plan to give Kells — who played quarterback for the majority of his high school career — an opportunity to be the starting quarterback. "We took a good look at him and said, 'Hey, this is the guy and I'm going to give him a chance,'" Molnar said. "A lot of people have that opportunity and haven't done a good job of carrying it out. He didn't have those things in his background, but we have high hopes for him." Kells showed plenty of promise 6d1f23a050
