The bowtie was a popular alternative to the Windsor knot before the 1920s. It was the first truly popular alternative knot to be used for what is now known as a "tie knot". The bowtie was introduced to the U.S. in the early 1930s by advertising agencies and department stores. Typically an even smaller bow is found at the tip of a typical Windsor knot; that knot is commonly referred to as a "half-bowtie". A full-sized bowtie may be used in place of a necktie, or on its own, as was often the case during the American blues era. It is also a popular way to indicate fraternity membership or house association allegiance. It is not to be confused with the "Hollywood" bowtie, which resembles the bowtie but has a longer straight section and is worn with a longer shirt-collar knot.
