blocking pop-ups is a pretty easy thing to do. if you have a good list of websites, you can just block them all, and you wont get a bunch of notifications from them. but theres a little trick to it, too. it requires a little registry hack and a couple of files, but it really is one of the easiest things you can do to block all those annoying pop-ups. we need to start with one of the most important things. blocking pop-ups. the best way to go about it is by creating a simple script that we can run from a shortcut on our desktop. (you can also run it from the command line, if you want.) the easiest way to do this is to start with a script called update-popups-blocker.bat. when youre done, youll have a shortcut on your desktop called updatepopupsblocker. right-click it, and youll see a menu, with one item on it that says run as administrator. click that, and itll open the cmd window, and youll see the line: but i do recommend the first method, because it will work correctly no matter what version of windows you use. i had to do a little editing to get this to work on windows xp, and even on windows 7, it works, but itll take a little work. ok, to make this work, we need to create a couple of files. first, we need to create a shortcut on our desktop, so that we can run it. to do this, we need to open up the windows start menu. click on the arrow by your system tray, and youll see a menu. click on the arrow next to all programs, and youll see a list of shortcuts that you can use. find and click on the shortcut that looks like this: for using deep freeze for activation and deactivation of pc on first time, you are required to create a master password. master password is required for activating and deactivating deep freeze. you can read more about master password on the below link. master password 5ec8ef588b
