I am using this software for Editing my Videos and Photos. For Videos, I can Trim my Videos with just one click, crop, frame them etc, and For Photos, I can organize my Photos, put them in Albums, add effects, draw and other such things. First, I want to share the positive experiences I am having with this software. I had been using Sony Vegas Pro for quite a long time, and was doing all the editing on my PC and then sharing the videos on my iPod. But after upgrading to Windows 8.1, I had to revert to using Sony Vegas Pro, because no other program is able to do all the editing on my Windows 8.1 system and at the same time, and upload the edited videos to my iPod Touch 5. My frustration was that I could not use the Sony Vegas Pro at all on my Windows 8.1 system. But fortunately, I found this software, CyberLink Media Suite and it is working absolutely fine. I can use it on my Windows 7 system, and it does all the editing on my Windows 8.1 system and upload the edited videos to my iPod Touch 5 at

They are so easy to find out of season (think about the number of potatoes in your supermarket in August) and with all the various bugs and diseases they have to contend with, they're in a pretty poor state when you do find them. So, I decided to make a big batch of caramelized onions to use in future salads, on burgers, to top burgers, to top a burger, and in burgers. But, really, it can be anything from a poutine to a cheesy potato gratin. It's just so easy to make and so tasty. Once you get to the stage where you can afford to go on buying ingredients, then you can simply add some bacon or ham or even shredded cheese on top. But this recipe is vegetarian and has less than 10 ingredients. This is the equivalent of having a jar of caramelized onions in the fridge all year round. Just like always. How to Make Caramelized Onions To make the onions, you're going to need 2 or 3 onions. I used 3. I also added some shallots, but you can just as well use 1 onion. Peel the onions if you want, but I think it's optional as the salt and sugar kind of do the job. Remove the central stem from the onions and cut them in half. Cut each half into quarters. Put a large saucepan on a medium heat and add the oil. Once it is hot, add the onions, and leave them to cook for about 30 minutes. You want them to be a deep golden brown.
