This is a very specific query against a very small part of a larger database. If I use EXPORT to a.CSV file, I cannot seem to get it to export anything since the uniqueidentifiers are being treated as strings. I know that I could write a stored procedure that takes the uniqueidentifiers out of the view and do the export from the stored procedure. But is there an easier way to export the data? A: You can use: SELECT IDENTITY(int,1) AS UniqueID FROM YourView Note that this will return values from 0 to 2147483647. If you need the integer value returned by IDENTITY() you can convert it to a different data type: SELECT CONVERT(int,IDENTITY(int,1)) AS UniqueID FROM YourView This will return 1. The reclassification of prostate cancer to a non-aggressive category based on PSA kinetics: an interdisciplinary approach. The goal of our study was to analyze the potential benefit in the management of patients with prostate cancer when the reclassification of tumor aggressiveness of individual prostate cancer patients into a non-aggressive category is based on the PSA kinetics. We performed a retrospective analysis of prostate cancer patients who underwent primary radical prostatectomy at the Department of Urology, Otto-
