Sunday, November 11, 2011 Have you ever seen a story where the main character meets their perfect match at a moving on "for richer or for poorer" event? Well I'm here to tell you about a story where the main characters' perfect match takes place at a "For the Love of Toys" event. Both of my boys LOVE their toys. The mom part of me loves it but the kid part of me also loves it. I'm a kid at heart and I'm not that hard on toys. The last year I have been a bit reluctant to hand over a toy, I still have a few toys in the house but I have been giving them to the boys' grandmothers. It's good to be useful but getting rid of toys? That just makes me sad. This weekend Aaron and I loaded up the car with some of our toys. We had a great time visiting all of our families but the boys had their noses in toy boxes. This is typical boys behavior. But it wasn't until after we left the house and started taking toys out the car that we realized that we had forgotten our Christmas trees in the car!" "Yes, but how are we going to carry it all in the house? We need a wagon." "We have a wagon, but where is the Christmas tree?" "I don't know, we couldn't find it in the car" "What if we left the door open and left it on the front porch?" "Ha, I don't think it's going to fit in the 79a2804d6b
