Unlike Lightroom 3 and 4, Lightroom 5 is an all-new application. The interface is much better than before and is loaded with many new features and faster. In the previous versions, the library could easily be flooded with large images which, frankly, took up most of the screen. The New Adobe Premier Architect feature does exactly what it says on the tin.

You can enlarge, reduce or rotate the proportions of images, either in the canvas or within the layers within the image. It's not the most intuitive tool to use. Features. I'm still looking forward to its next round of updates. It's not perfect, but it's not bad either.
