I thought of using the Date() function as I can't think of any native way to do it... My code currently looks like: var year = new Date().getFullYear(); var today = new Date(); var startdate = new Date(year, 11, 22, 5, 0, 0); var enddate = new Date(year, 11, 22, 5, 0, 0); alert(startdate); and it returns: Mon Nov 22 2010 00:00:00 GMT-0700 (Pacific Daylight Time) but it should return: Fri Nov 19 2010 00:00:00 GMT-0800 (Pacific Daylight Time) What am I doing wrong? A: You can't really reliably do it this way... without using something like moment.js or doing a lot of string manipulations. Story highlights Police suspect blowback was used to kill CIA officer, al-Maliki says US general says US mission to train and equip Iraqi security forces "completed" Possible CIA Station Chief Brown, killed in 2009, was scheduled to testify Thursday Iraqi forces captured two men Sunday on suspicion of conspiring with al Qaeda's Iraq branch Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki again blamed the Shiite-dominated militias of Iraq's government for Saturday's killing of a U.S. CIA officer who was helping train his country's security forces. With Obama's top national security adviser and officials from other key agencies in town to discuss Iraq, al-Maliki said there was "clear evidence" that Iranian-backed militias were responsible for the killing of CIA officer Donald A. Ford, whose murder became the highest-profile attack on the Iraqi security forces. "We hold the militias responsible for what happened," al-Maliki said Monday. "We
