Ginseng has been reported to have various pharmacological activities, including anti-oxidative, anti-inflammatory and anti-cancer effects. In this study, we evaluated the protective effect of Ginsenoside-Rb1 (GRb1) in a human lung adenocarcinoma cell line with attenuated stress resistance, and its relation with autophagy. GRb1 exhibited a protective effect in A549 cells through the stimulation of autophagy. Autophagy induction was related to the lysosome-mediated processing of LC3 and the increase of p62 expression. Treatment of GRb1 resulted in the acceleration of autophagosome formation and intracellular degradation, but surprisingly, the increase of LC3-II and p62 expression. GRb1 increased cathepsin D expression and promoted degradation of cathepsin D, which may inhibit lysosomal activity. Furthermore, treatment with GRb1 attenuated stress-induced ERK activation. Inhibition of ERK activation by PD98059 attenuated the protective effects of GRb1 in A549 cells, and promoted LC3-II and p62 expression. We conclude that GRb1 induces autophagy. Moreover, GRb1 elicits cytoprotective activity in A549 cells via ERK activation. Inhibition of ERK activation increased the expression of p62 and LC3-II, which is related to the degradation of cathepsin D, indicating the impairment of lysosome activity. Our findings suggest that GRb1 acts on both autophagy and lysosomes to ameliorate ER stress, and it is beneficial to human health.Q: CakePHP: Run a function within a model when form is saved This is really a two-part question: How do I get Cake
